Description

The Global Management Summer School (GMSS) is held by the Department of Management Science and Innovation (MSI) in the Faculty of Engineering Sciences at University College London (UCL) in London.

In July 2014, the GMSS will welcome over 30 MBA and postgraduate management students from around the world who will join MSc Management students from UCL to study in business and management issues in a UK and European context in an intensive, 2-week programme.

Under the guidance of UCL academics and practitioners from major UK companies, participants will link their experience and education to management theory and practice, specific to the UK and EU. Participants will obtain a greater awareness and understanding of the business and management challenges faced in the UK and EU, and learn how local companies apply concepts in leadership, strategy, negotiation, corporate social responsibility, finance, and marketing to overcome these challenges and succeed globally.

Participants will have the opportunity to share their knowledge and ambitions, and will network with their peers from around the world as well as with London-based professionals.

MSI is a part of UCL, one of the world's leading academic institutions (ranked 4th in the world after MIT, Harvard, and Cambridge in the 2013/14 QS World University Rankings). It benefits from being located in the centre of London, the world's leading global financial and professional services centre.

Content

Participants will receive over 20 hours of academic instruction from UCL faculty members covering various business and management issues specific to the UK and Europe.

Participants will complete a 1-day professional development course on capital markets delivered by the London Stock Exchange Group Academy at their headquarters in the City of London financial district.

Participants will undertake a 2-day 'Professional Skills in the UK' course delivered by UCL careers advisors as well as practitioners from major UK companies at a venue in the Canary Wharf financial district.

Participants will be involved in insight sessions on the management consulting and banking industries in the UK (1-day each) including workshops, presentations, networking, and company visits led by UCL careers advisors and industry practitioners.

Participants will have the opportunity to visit local attractions in and around London.

Academic Outcomes

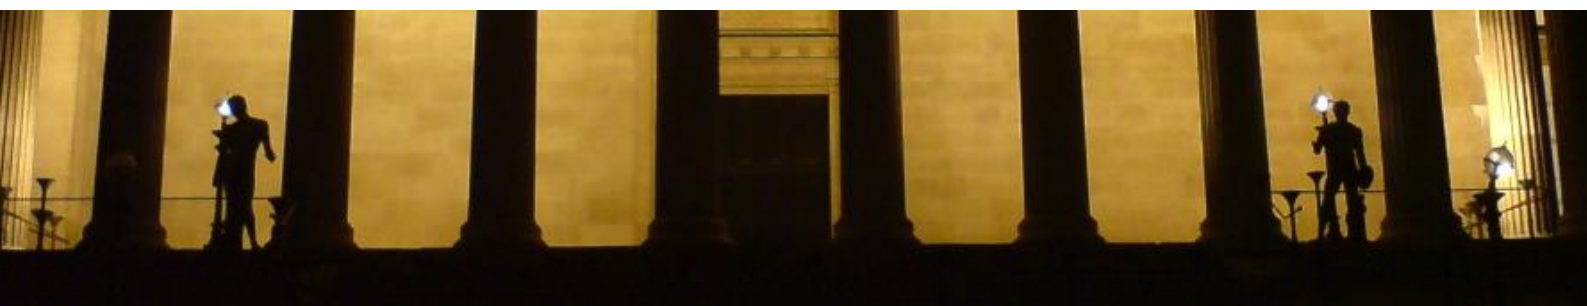

- Participants will acquire a solid understanding of contemporary management challenges and opportunities in the UK and the EU.
- They will receive a total of over 50 hours of academic- and practitioner-led content.
- They will have the opportunity to develop their international professional network by interacting with employers and other students from around the world.
- Participants will be awarded a certificate for their involvement at the GMSS.
